Grand Jury Investigations Being Sought!

By Jeff Maehr

The corruption within Archuleta and LaPlata Counties, and many other counties across America (and state governments) is demanding a much harder approach from citizens. When the so-called leaders, our public servants, no longer listen to the will of the people, or have lost their moral compass and become derelict in their legal and Constitutional duties, one of the largest guns we have is that of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury was originally established to prevent corrupt courts and government from running amuck, and has teeth that can not only stop this activity, but can put those criminals and traitors behind bars through criminal indictments.

When a public servant violates their oath of office, this is treason, and a felony. When they ignore criminal activities, even after being placed on NOTICE of such, this is complicity in that criminal enterprise. When evidence of Racketeering has been obtained, on multiple fronts, the Grand Jury is the tool to crush this type of criminal behavior.

The Free Press has been contacted by several groups from Archuleta and LaPlata counties regarding illegal activities at multiple levels, and action is now in the mill that will not only send shock waves throughout our area, but will be a wake up call to other counties where similar activities are taking place.

The Grand Jury is open to all citizens. No one can legally be prevented from access to the Grand Jury, or the ones stopping such access are guilty of Obstruction of Justice, a felony crime. Oftentimes, Grand Juries have been in the pockets of corrupt local judges or politicians, and are simple rubberstamping cases as they are told, but if this is the case, it can not only be stopped, but they, too, can be indicted for obstruction of Justice.

The Free Press investigated local Grand Jury information at the LaPlata County Courthouse. We were told that the last Grand Jury convened in this district was 1982... 27 years ago. Could this be why there is so much unconstitutional activity in our district? Could there be a relationship here?

National groups are proceeding with Grand Jury investigations into all aspects of local government activities, and the Archuleta County Law Club reports they're working with the same groups... and with an attorney group who is "shocked" by this behavior... to address the blatant violation of Due Process rights, violation of Oath of Offices... both felonies, among other felonious activities in Court and County Recorder's Offices, etc. The evidence is well documented, and will be used where such behavior continues despite legal NOTICE being given to various offices and public servants.

This type of behavior creates a personal liability for everyone involved, (local AND State levels) and loss of their positions, not to mention financial loss could be substantial. Criminal charges could also develop in conjunction with the Department of Justice.

The Grand Jury, which represents the People, and a fourth branch of government, has been ignored by local governments, and even Judge Gregory Lyman, who oversees Grand Juries in this district stated that it could be that local government has been in violation of the law on this, and openly admitted to the Free Press that he "knows nothing about Grand Juries."

An independent Grand Jury, free of bias, and corruption, and consisting of average people in the community who can review evidence, conduct hearings, examine, subpoena documents and in every other way, obtain all the facts and decide whether there is enough evidence to convict... anyone... public servant or any individual involved with corruption or lawlessness in ANY manner. Let's go for it!

You are Not the Boss of Me!

By Larken Rose

Two hundred and thirty-three years ago, in Philadelphia, a bunch of guys got together and wrote a letter to their king. The letter was very eloquent, and well thought out, but it basically boiled down to this:

"Dear King George, You're not the boss of us!

Sincerely,
A Bunch of Troublemakers"

That's essentially what the Declaration of Independence was: a bunch of radicals declaring that they would no longer recognize the right of their king to rule them, at all, ever again. They went on to create a new boss, which turned into a new oppressor, but we'll get to that in a moment. First, let's consider the essence of that attitude: "You're not the boss of me!" This July 4th, like every year, millions of Americans [celebrated] Independence Day with various parades, picnics, fireworks, and so on. But how many of those people celebrating have ever actually considered what the Declaration was actually about, and what the colonists actually did? The colonists did not merely beg the king to change his ways. In fact, the Declaration explains how they had tried that, to no avail. Instead, the colonists were doing something far more drastic.

In short, they committed treason. They broke the law. They disobeyed their government. They were traitors, criminals and tax cheats. The Boston Tea Party was not merely a tax protest, but open lawlessness. Furthermore, truth be told, some of the colonists were even cop-killers. At Lexington, when King George's "law enforcers" told the colonists to lay down their guns, the colonists responded with, "No, you're not the boss of us!" (Well, that was the meaning, if not the exact verbiage.) And so we had "The Shot Heard 'Round the World," widely regarded as the beginning of the American Revolution. Looking back now, we know the outcome. We know who eventually won, and we don't mind cheering for the rebels.

But make no mistake: when you cheer for the founders of this country, you are cheering for law-breakers and traitors. As well you should. But, for all the flag-waving and celebrating that goes on every July 4th, do Americans actually believe in what the colonists did? Do they really believe in the attitude expressed in the Declaration of Independence? Are they really still capable of supporting a mantra of "You're not the boss of me!?"

In, short, no. Imagine the equivalent of what the colonists did so many years ago, being done today. Imagine a group of people writing a letter to the United States government, sending a letter to Congress and to the President, saying that they would no longer pay federal taxes, they would no longer obey federal laws, and that they would resist--by force, if necessary--any attempt by federal agents to enforce those laws. How would a group which did such things be viewed today, by most Americans? They would be viewed as nut-cases, scofflaws and terrorists, despicable criminals and malcontents. They would be scorned as the scum of the earth, despised by just about everyone who today celebrates Independence Day. How ironic. So why the double standard? Why would the American public today condemn the exact same attitudes and behaviors which they glorify and praise in the context of the American Revolution? Quite simply, it's because, for all the proud talk of "land of the free and home of the brave," the spirit of resistance--the courage to say "You're not the boss of us!"--has been trained out of the American people. We have become a nation of wimps.

For years and years, in the churches and schools, on the news, in the media, and from everywhere around us, we have been taught one thing above all else: that obedience to authority is the highest virtue, and that disobedience is the worst sin. As a result, even most of those who now claim to be zealous advocates for individual rights and personal liberty will

Jeff Maehr

What does one see when we compare today with, say, the founding of our country? What comparison is there between the people then, and now? What provides for or forges a group of people into becoming a great and successful people?

What forces were mustered that led our forefathers and mothers across the western wilderness blazing out trails and lives for themselves and their children? What strength was needed to survive, let alone prosper through all that? Yes, many fell in the wilderness. Many didn't make it and turned around and went back, but they nevertheless tried. Personal independence requires some personal fortitude, some inner strength, some willingness to risk things in order to grow and develop. Not everyone throughout history had that, but enough of them did, and the story of America has been written.

The problem we now face is, what story is America telling today? What is the legacy Americans are leaving behind? What example to the world is on display for all to see? The sad truth is that far too many are seemingly unaware or uncaring as to where we are headed or why millions of Americans are coasting... taking a free ride on the wings of freedom, never thinking of all that freedom entails.

Over the last 10 decades, freedoms have been taken for granted, and accepted without payment by most...like accepting an inheritance from a dead relative and figuring it is all yours without any responsibility. The freedoms our Founding Fathers and Mothers established came with the specific instructions on how to maintain those freedoms and a union... a republic that could survive the unrelenting elements of human nature left unchecked... greed, power hunger, corruption, oppression, suppression, theft, treason...

We have been deluding ourselves into believing that those we elect will control themselves and protect our interests. We stopped being the guardians of the Constitution long ago, and we are paying a stiff price today. We've allowed corruption and lawlessness to flourish, even promoting it by voting in those liars who speak all we want to hear, believing their lies out of hope, then seeing their scheming behind our backs to get what they want.

We've believed that flag waving, talking about our country, and feeling "proud" of how we support our troops, and condemn those who speak ill of bad government is the same as patriotism, and that it somehow actually accomplishes something of value... it is a "feel good" placebo... a fake "medicine" that we've allowed to replace the real thing... courage, strength, righteous indignation and unselfishness. We've become a couch potato people... closing our eyes to disaster... sticking our heads in the sand, in denial of the reality that we've made bad choices, and compound those bad choices with more bad choices, but much worse because we continue to blindly hope and wish that some kind of mindless magic will save us.

Here's an excerpt from an article that hits the nail on the head on some of these issues:

"Independence Day would seem to be an especially ill-chosen time to denounce what passes for patriotism in the United States. But maybe not, because on this day Americans express their patriotism – in truth, little more than worship of statism and militarism – in extraordinary displays and celebrations, thus presenting more prominent targets to those who have no sympathy for patriotism as it is commonly understood in this country.

I suppose that already some readers are thinking, "Higgs is an America hater. Why doesn't he do us all a favor and get the hell out of this great country while he still can?" Anyone who is thinking such a thought, however, is utterly mistaken. I do not hate this country, though I do despise the governments – local, state, federal, and hybrid – that now rule it.

Bill Clinton once felt moved to scold the people who took offense at some of the government's especially monstrous recent crimes by saying, "You can't love your country and hate your government." Au contraire, Slick Willy. I am living proof that you can indeed. I do so in every waking minute of every day, and sometimes in my sleep, too. To be perfectly frank, I have trouble in understanding how any decent, halfway honest person who loves America cannot hate its governments, inasmuch as by their laws, their judicial decisions, their regulations, and their daily conduct, they prove themselves a standing reproach to every ideal embraced by the men who shed their blood to establish this country's independence from the British Empire. Do you recall those first patriots' declared devotion to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness? Can anyone today look upon the pack of scoundrels, liars, thieves, and (in all too many cases) murderers who control the governments of this great country and feel anything but the most wrenching revulsion?

But if I feel this way about our glorious government leaders, how can I then maintain that I love the country? It's really easy. I simply recognize that everything I love about it – and there is a great deal – stands to its governments more or less in the same relation that matter stands to anti-almost always couch their "demands" with disclaimers that, of course, their efforts for justice will be done "within the system," and that they would never advocate anything "illegal." They claim to be devout proponents of freedom, and yet all they ever do is seek a political solution, whether through lobbying of politicians, elections, or other government-approved means.

Of course, government never approves of anything which might actually endanger government power. As the bumper-sticker says, "If voting made a difference, it would be illegal." And why should civilized people assume that change must be done "legally" and "within the system?" That is obviously NOT what the Declaration of Independence was about. In fact, the Declaration states quite plainly that when a government ceases to be a protector of individual liberty, it is not only the right, but the DUTY of the people to ALTER or ABOLISH that form of government. In other words, when the government becomes an oppressor, instead of a protector--as is obviously the case today--the people are morally obligated to adopt an attitude of, "You're not the boss of us!"

So how many Americans are doing that? Almost none. Instead, even the most vocal critics of corruption and injustice usually do little more than banging their heads against a brick wall, begging, in half a dozen different ways, for the tyrants to please be nicer to us. (Meanwhile, they go to great lengths to distance themselves from people like me, for fear of what the general public might think of them. As a result, I believe the general public, and those in government, view them pretty much as I view them: as harmless and irrelevant conformists, destined to forever beg for freedom, and never achieve it.)

Make no mistake, begging and whining is not what the Declaration of Independence was about. It was about breaking the law, when the law is unjust. It was about committing treason, when the rulers became oppressive. It was about disobedience--civil disobedience, when effective, and not-so-civil disobedience when necessary. It was about open resistance, including violent resistance when called for. So where is that attitude today? Where is the candidate advocating such a thing? Patrick Henry, Thomas Paine, Samuel Adams--where are the modern equivalents? For all the whining about extremists, where are those willing to openly resist injustice? Not only don't most Americans believe in resisting tyranny, they feel extremely uncomfortable just hearing others talk about it, even in abstract terms (like this). Maybe it's just that we're not quite at the level of oppression to justify resistance. Is that it? Hardly.

If two or three percent taxation justified rebellion in 1776, why doesn't fifty percent taxation justify it now? If a few puny excise taxes on tea and pieces of paper justified it then, why don't the myriad of unavoidable, crushing taxes at all levels, and the hordes of callous, vindictive tax collectors justify it now? If the relatively unusual cases of Redcoats abusing colonists justified it then, why doesn't it justify it when American police see no problem with randomly stopping, detaining, interrogating and searching anyone they want, whenever they want, for any reason or no reason at all? Does anyone think Thomas Jefferson, if he were alive today, would quietly allow himself to be strip-searched, and allow his belongings to be rummaged through, by some brain-dead TSA thug? Read the Fourth Amendment. They had a revolution over that sort of thing. Does anyone think that Patrick Henry would take kindly to being robbed blind to pay for whatever war-mongering the politicians wanted to engage in this week? Read what the Founders said about standing armies.

They had a revolution over that sort of thing. Think James Madison would go along with being disarmed, by the various state and federal control freaks? Read the Second Amendment. They had a revolution over that sort of thing. Think George Washington would be happy to have both his earnings and savings constantly looted by a parasite class, to pay for all manner of wealth redistribution, political handouts and other socialist garbage? Think Thomas Paine would gladly be extorted to give all his money to some giant, failed corporation or some huge international bank? Think the founders would have quietly gone along with what this country has become today? Think they would have done nothing more than vote, or whine? Well, the founders are dead. And, unfortunately, so is their spirit of resistance. In short, just about all of the flag-waving and celebrating that happens every July 4th is nothing but empty hypocrisy. How many Americans today can say, loudly and proudly, like they mean it, "Give me liberty or give me death!?" Or, at least, in the modern vernacular, "You're not the boss of me!?" Anyone? In this nation that imagines itself to be the land of the free and the home of the brave, where are those who dare to resist, or even dare to talk about it? And I don't mean voting, or whining to your congressman, or begging your masters to not whip you so hard. I'm talking about resisting, refusing to obey.

America, where is your Independence Day pride now? Exactly what are you proud of? I have a message for you, from a guy named Sam. Samuel Adams, that is. Yeah, the beer guy. But he did a little more for this country than make beer. Here is his message: "If ye love wealth better than liberty, the tranquility of servitude better than the animating contest of freedom, go home from us in peace. We ask not your counsels or arms. Crouch down and lick the hands which feed you. May your chains set lightly upon you, and may posterity forget that ye were our countrymen." When's the last time you heard a modern so-called "statesman" say something like that? So what happened? When did Americans lose their ability to say, "You're not the boss of me," and why? Yes, most people are scared, and for good reason. With the capacity for violence of the current police state, and the willingness of the politicians and their thugs to crush anyone who threatens their power, everyone has to choose his battles carefully, and decide for himself what he's willing to risk, what is worth fighting for and what isn't.

That makes sense, but there is more to it than just fear. Because not only won't most Americans resist, but they will condemn anyone who does. If you do what the founders did, most people in this country would call you a tax cheat, a malcontent, a criminal, a traitor, even a terrorist. Why? Why do Americans now vehemently condemn those who say and do exactly what the Founders did a couple hundred years ago? When did our priorities and view of the world change so drastically, and why? I'll tell you why. Gradually, and very systematically, we have been trained to measure our own worth, not by what we produce, not by how we treat other people, but by how well we obey authority. Consider the term, "law abiding taxpayer." How many people wear that label as a badge of honor? "I am a law-abiding taxpayer!"

When they say that, they mean, "I'm a good person." But is that what it really means? Well, "law-abiding" just means that you do whatever the politicians tell you to do. We speak with great reverence of this thing called "the law," as if it is the decree of the gods, which no decent human being would dare to disobey. But what is it really? It's whatever the politicians decide to command you to do. Why on earth would anyone think that obedience to a bunch of liars and crooks is some profound moral obligation? Is there any reason for us to treat with reverence such commands and demands? No rational reason, no.

Congratulations to all who participated!

The only reason we do it is because we have been trained to do it. Some might point out that obeying the laws against theft and murder is a good thing to do. Well, yes and no. It is good to refrain from committing theft and murder, but it is NOT because "the law" says so. It is because theft and murder are inherently wrong, as they infringe upon the rights of others. And that was true before any politician passed a "law" about it, and will be true even if they "legalize" theft and murder (as every government has done, in the name of "taxation" and "war").

What is right and wrong does not at all depend upon what is "legal" or "illegal." And if you need POLITICIANS to tell you what is right and what is wrong, you need your head examined. Instead, you should judge the validity of so-called "laws" by whether they match what is inherently right and wrong. Thomas Jefferson put it this way:

"Rightful liberty is unobstructed action according to our will within limits drawn around us by the equal rights of others. I do not add 'within the limits of the law,' because the law is often but the tyrant's will, and always so when it violates the rights of the individual." So why should anyone be proud of being "law-abiding," when all it means is blindly obeying whatever arbitrary commands the parasite class spews out this week?

And pride in being a "taxpayer" is no better, since all that phrase means is that you give the politicians lots of money. When, exactly, did obeying politicians and giving them money become the measure of whether you're a good person? Consider Nazi Germany. Were the law-abiding taxpayers in Nazi Germany the good guys? No. By obeying the so-called "laws" of that time, the majority allowed, or even assisted in, a nearly incomprehensible level of evil. And by being "taxpayers," they provided the funding for it. No, the good people in Germany were the criminals and tax cheats, who refused to assist, even passively, in the oppressions done in the name of "government."

The same is true under the regimes of Stalin, Lenin, Mao, Pol Pot, Castro--you can go right down the list (and it's a very long list). Under every nasty regime in history, the obedient subjects, who quietly did as they were told, the law-abiding taxpayers, were not the good guys.

The law-breakers and rebels, the so-called traitors and terrorists, those were the good guys. How about in this country, when slavery was legal? The cowards were the ones obeying the law, while the good guys broke it. How about here, today? Is it good to fund what the government is doing? Do you have some moral obligation to give your "fair share" of however many thousands of dollars, so Obama can give it to his banker buddies? Is it noble to fund whatever war the politicians decide to engage in this week? Do you like paying for the detention and torture of people who haven't been convicted, or even charged with any crime? (By the way, instead of doing away with that, Obama just gave it a new name: preventative detention.) Is it some great virtue to have helped to finance the police state growing up all around you, on both the federal and state levels? In short, is being a "law-abiding taxpayer" really something you should be proud of, or is it something you should be ashamed of? Over time we have forgotten a very important secret--a secret the control freaks don't want divided amongst ourselves, accepting the created divisions such as Republican vs Democrat, black vs white, elite vs common people. We've been made the enemy of government BY government.

We are Kings and Queens, Princes and Princesses, but we are all acting like servants, slaves and sheep, being fleeced, used, abused and deceived into abdicating our rightful authority and position as the true rulers of this republic.

Nothing could stop us if we stood together, stopped the illusion, stepped out of the matrix chaining us that we've accepted, and take back what is rightfully ours, given to us all to properly use.

We have become used to these chains and blinders, and corrupt government will NEVER change and will ALWAYS require force of some kind to comply, or be removed. This very union is evidence of that truth.

Collectively, we have the ability to transform this republic into the jewel and example it was intended to be. We have the power to rise up and put the corruption, the greed, the fraud, theft and all other graft out of business in government..

It is this ability and power that is being systematically eroded, even to the extent that we, ourselves, are beginning to believe the lies and accepting the slavery status as normal. How far we have fallen.

Our indoctrination into this scheme began in public schools, continues in the media, and through the countless distractions served up to us to maintain a zombie-like trance over us.

And we, the sovereign People, and the once great union of sovereign states, have chosen to abandon all that could possibly defend freedom here, and abroad, and are simply, and without much of a wimper from most, watching this experiment in the greatest level of freedom and prosperity the world has ever seen, die from lack of interest.

May God be merciful to the people He established as self-rulers... their own Kings and Queens... but who are tossing this freedom, honor and wealth away like an old used rag. Like the richness of the blessings, so, too, will be the depth of the punishment and sorrow that will follow... all because so many simply don't seem to care.

Has our faith, and our appreciation for such abundance faded to expecting all the blessings for nothing? God will not be mocked!

you to know; a secret some of the Founders hinted at, though even most of them didn't seem to fully grasp it. Ready for it? You own yourself. You are not the property of the politicians, or anyone else. I own me, and you own you. Each of you owns himself. Sounds simple enough, right? And most people respond with, "Well duh, of course. That's no secret. We knew that." But in reality most people don't know that. If you own yourself, would anyone have the right to take, without your consent, the fruits of your labor? What you earn, with your time and effort, does anyone have the right to take that from you by force? Of course not, most will answer. Really? And what if they call it "taxation?" "Oh, well, that's different." No, it isn't.

If you own yourself, would anyone have the right to force you to pay rent for a house you already paid for, under threat of taking your house away? Of course not. What if they call it "property taxes?" Oh, that's different. No, it isn't. And you can go right down the list: if you truly own yourself, the vast majority of so-called "laws," at all levels, are absolutely illegitimate. As Jefferson put it, ANY so-called "law" that infringes upon individual liberty--which is dang near all of them--is inherently bogus. But let's take it one step further. If you own yourself-- your life, liberty and property--doesn't that imply that you have the right to defend those things from any and all aggressors? Yes. What if the aggressors call themselves "government" and call their attacks and robberies "law" and "taxes?"

You still have the right. Changing the name of an act cannot make something bad into something good. And if you have the right to defend your life, liberty and property from all aggressors, it stands to reason that you have the right to equip yourself to do so. In other words, you have the right to be armed--the right to possess the equipment to exert whatever force is necessary to repel any attempts to infringe upon your rights to life, liberty and property. I know it makes people uncomfortable (especially people who work for the government) when I say the following: I want every sane, adult American to have the ability to use force, including deadly force, against government agents. I don't want people randomly gunning down cops, but I do want the people to retain the ability to forcibly resist their own government. The very concept bothers a lot of people, but what is the alternative? The alternative is something a lot scarier: that the people should NOT have the means to resist their own government. But, once again, even most people who claim to be vehemently pro-freedom, don't like to talk about what that really means. Many "gun rights" organizations, for example, go to great lengths to beg the politicians to LET them remain armed. Why? At Lexington, when the British troops told the colonists to lay down their weapons, what was the response? Did the colonists say, "Awe, can't we keep them, pretty please?" No, they had a very different attitude, something along the lines of, "You're not the boss of us!" If you own yourself--and this is a big one--it is not only your right, but your most profound obligation as a human being, to judge for yourself what is right and wrong, and to act accordingly. But what if people claiming to be "authority" want to force you to do something contrary to what you deem to be right? Do you have an obligation to obey them, and ignore your own conscience? No. What if their threats are called "legislation?" It makes no difference.

You are always, at all times, in every situation, obligated to do what you deem right, no matter what so-called "government" and "authority" and "law" have to say about it. And when the tyrants and control freaks, authoritarian thugs and megalomaniacs, try to tell you that are an evil, nasty, despicable criminal and traitor for daring to think for yourself, you have a right and duty to stand firm, and say, with confidence, "You are not the boss of me!" <http://www.larkenrose.com>

Arizona Legislature Takes The Lead In Backing Self-Defense

The Arizona Senate passed three important self-defense bills in a session that lasted into the early morning hours Wednesday. First, SB 1113 enables law-abiding Right-to-Carry permit holders to carry firearms for self-defense in restaurants. This NRA-backed bill passed by an overwhelming, bi-partisan majority of 19-8 and will now be sent to Governor Jan Brewer's (R) desk for her consideration.

Kansas Attorney General Steve Six (D) today announced that the State of Kansas will now recognize non-resident Right-to-Carry permits issued by any of the 22 states already recognized.

The Real ID has morphed into the PASS Act

S-1261, the morphed "Real ID Act" is now being pushed through Congress by our treasonous Representatives. This "Act" will utilize facial recognition and RFID technologies. "All Americans are being enrolled into a single global biometric identification system that will link their body to the ability to buy and sell. This Drivers License "pass" will be used as a one-card-fits-all piece of ID... border crossing, purchasing, as a credit card, even to obtain cash. The government is bribing states to go along with its plan.

"Americans should be worried because by being enrolled in this global biometric identification system, what we have seen in the past, not in the future, the use of closed circuit television cameras, surveillance cameras, and biometric, specifically facial recognition technology, we've seen those used simultaneously in real time...those cameras aren't targeted at terrorists, they are targeted at YOU, American Citizens... you will be able to be identified, tracked and all personal sensitive information about you will be known to the government in the country you are in." (Mark Lerner-Stop Real ID Coalition)

AAMVA and ICAO (agency of the United Nations) has been called by the Department of Homeland Security, "the hub and backbone" of the REAL ID. The UN has no business in an of our affairs.

The following representatives are on the committee hearing the talk about this act. We need to bombard them with calls and tell them this is NOT what we want or will support, and that it is treason, plain and simple. Tell them:

1. We are opposed to Real ID and the PASS Act
2. We are opposed to being enrolled in a Biometric Identification System
3. We don't want Social Security Numbers in our DMV databases
4. No RFID chips in our Driver's Licences
5. No federal intervention with the issuance of our State driver's licenses

6. We are not willing to trade our freedom for security.

All of these actions are unconstitutional and a direct attack on our civil liberties and our unalienable rights. Call:

Various Amendments in our Constitution are being attacked, and the Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms is clearly next in line to fall if this continues... one of the United Nation's goals for America... no way to protect ourselves from them.

Please watch this 11 minute segment about this treasonous "act" at this website:

The Federal Government (our loving protectors) are once again attempting to ignore the will of the vast majority of Americans who see this blatant attempt as just more control of people. These and so many other attempts to counter the Constitution and Freedoms are clear evidence of treason and should be used by those documenting all these steps for future trials. - stoprealidcoalition.com

Eligibility Bill Co-Sponsors growing

U.S. Rep. Marsha Blackburn, a Tennessee Republican, has become the sixth co-sponsor of a proposal by Rep. Bill Posey, R-Fla., that would require documentation of eligibility from presidential candidates.

A participant at a forum on a political website noted "average citizens have to have a copy of our birth certificate just to apply for a passport, but the president of the United States doesn't have to show theirs??? This doesn't make sense at all."

Senate bill fines people refusing health coverage.

Americans who refuse to buy affordable medical coverage could be hit with fines of more than $1,000 under a health care overhaul bill unveiled Thursday by key Senate Democrats looking to fulfill President Barack Obama's top domestic priority.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated the fines will raise around $36 billion over 10 years. Senate aides said the penalties would be modeled on the approach taken by Massachusetts, which now imposes a fine of about $1,000 a year on individuals who refuse to get coverage. Under the federal legislation, families would pay higher penalties than individuals.

In a revamped health care system envisioned by lawmakers, people would be required to carry health insurance just like motorists must get auto coverage now. The government would provide subsidies for the poor and many middle-class families, but those who still refuse to sign up would face penalties.

Minn. lawmaker vows not to complete Census

Outspoken Republican Rep. Michele Bachmann says she's so worried that information from next year's national census will be abused that she will refuse to fill out anything more than the number of people in her household.

In an interview Wednesday morning with The Washington Times "America's Morning News," Mrs. Bachmann, Minnesota Republican, said the questions have become "very intricate, very personal" and she also fears ACORN, the Young Americans for Liberty (YAL) is a youth organization dedicated to restoring this republic to its original intended status. The youth of our country are the future, and schools and campuses all across America are forming YAL groups.

YAL is the continuation of Students for Ron Paul (SFP). In less than 8 months, SFP established over 500 college and high school chapters in all 50 states and over 26,000 students joined the Ron Paul 2008 campaign.

With this network, YAL seeks to recruit, train, educate, and mobilize students on the ideals of liberty and the Constitution. This is not a new beginning but a continuation of a youth movement already brewing in this country. Our objective is to facilitate its success.

A member of Young Americans for Liberty is between the ages of 15 and 39 and pays an annual due. Individuals under the age of 15 can still join, but will be considered Junior members. To start, dues are only $10/year. Benefits include subscription to "Young American Revolution" magazine,

If you are not within this age bracket, don't despair! Senior (over 39) YAL members are welcome to join for a $50 annual donation and will receive many of the same great benefits.

YAL Mission Statement

The mission of Young Americans for Liberty (YAL) is to train, educate, and mobilize youth activists committed to "winning on principle." Our goal is to cast the leaders of tomorrow and reclaim the policies, candidates, and direction of our government.

YAL Statement of Principles!

We are the Young Americans for Liberty (YAL). As Americans we recognize the God-given natural rights of life, liberty, and property set forth by our Founding Fathers. Our country was created to protect the freedoms of the individual and directed by we the people.

We recognize that freedom deserves responsibility and therefore we hold ourselves to a high moral character and conduct. Integrity emphasizes our stance towards action. Principle defines our outlook towards government. Peace and prosperity drives our ambitions towards our countrymen.

We inherit a corrupt, coercive world that has lost respect for voluntary action. Our government has failed and dragged our country into moral decay. The political class dominates the agenda with a violent, callous, controlling grip. And, for this we do not stand. We welcome limited government conservatives, classical liberals, and libertarians who trust in the creed we set forth.

WE, as Young Americans for Liberty believe:

- THAT government is the negation of liberty;
- THAT voluntary action is the only ethical behavior;
- THAT respect for the individual's property is fundamental to a peaceful society;
- THAT violent action is only warranted in defense of one's property;
- THAT the individual owns his/her body and is therefore responsible for his/her actions;
- THAT society is a responsibility of the people, not the government.

YAL is in partnership with Campaign for Liberty (campaignforliberty.org) and many other freedom groups and organizations. For more Information, go to www.yaliberty.org/community organizing group that came under fire for its voter registration efforts last year, will be part of the Census Bureau's door-to-door information collection efforts.

"I know for my family the only question we will be answering is how many people are in our home," she said. "We won't be answering any information beyond that, because the Constitution doesn't require any information beyond that."

<http://washingtontimes.com/news/2009/jun/17/exclusive-minn-lawmaker-fears-census-abuse/>

Editor's Note: The Census, required by the Constitution, is for two specific purposes: 1. To determine the number of people in any given area for determining how many Representatives each area should have for proper representation in Congress.

2. To determine the population for direct taxation according to numbers, which should be applied to "income" taxes (for those few Americans who actually have "income"), or any other form of direct taxes.

Stop Knife Ban Now! ccrkba.org

Write your Senators NOW to STOP funding for Customs' Pocket Knife Grab. As you are aware from our earlier alert, Customs is proposing to prohibit the import of assisted and one-hand opening pocket knives and in the process has so broadly re-defined what a Switchblade is under the Federal Switchblade Act, that it could cover almost all pocket knives, with potential far-reaching consequences to every knife owner.

Our best bet to stop Customs in the short term is for Congress to prevent them from spending a dime to implement their proposed ruling. The Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Bill will be taken up by the Senate early this week. We need your help NOW to rally support for an amendment to stop funding for this Customs rulemaking.

We only have a very few days to get their attention. Contacting Senator Patty Murray [D-WA] and Senator George Voinovich [R-OH] is particularly important because they are ranking members on the Senate Appropriations Committee's Subcommittee on Homeland Security. Contacting your own Senators is also critically important because we'll need their support as well to see this passed.

You will find more information, email addresses and links for the Senators and sample letters to send to the Senators on our partner Knife Rights' web site at the following sites: www.kniferights.org and <http://bit.ly/DlHfv>.

The Third Jihad (DVD)
Radical Islam's Vision for America

By PublicScope Films

Can the United States of America as we know it crumble from within in just a few short years?

The stunning possibility is more than just a dream to some enemies of the greatest nation on Earth. It is a fast-becoming probability.

"We all know about terrorism. This is the war you don't know about," declares The Third Jihad: Radical Islam's Vision for America, an eye-opening movie now available on DVD.

The movie, the newest offering from the producers of the capturing documentary film Obsession, explores the existence of radical Islam in America and the emerging risk that this "homegrown jihad" poses to national security, western liberties and the American way of life.

"It's an entire movement, and the idea of it is hatred for our way of life," says former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani.

Featured in the DVD are clips of Muslim leaders in the U.S., including Abdul Alim Musa, an imam in Washington D.C., who boldly states, "On our website we talk about the Islamic State of North America by 2050."

The film examines a secret document uncovered by the FBI that reveals the plans of the radicals already in America.

The Third Jihad, narrated by devout Muslim American Dr. M. Zuhdi Jasser, opens with the following statement: "This is not a film about Islam. It is about the threat of radical Islam. Only a small percentage of the world's 1.3 billion Muslims are radical. This film is about them." Go to our Resource page, P. 22 to get the DVD.

Editor's Note: Among the many other threats we face as a People, radical Islam is just one more threat that Americans are faced with if we continue to do nothing to take back our freedoms and to stand for our republic and for our beliefs. It is an absolute that "SOMETHING" will fill the void created by our apathy and non-action... and that void will ALWAYS be filled by the enemy. Ten million radical Muslims in America believe Obama is the 12th imam, or "messiah," and have terrorist training camps across America. What will Americans do when they unleash their agenda in concert with other perverted government actions???

GMO Corn now has Contraceptive

Henry Kissinger once stated that "if you control oil, you control nations. If you control food, you control all the people of the world." Now, we have genetically modified corn that actually contains a contraceptive and other crops with vaccinations as part of their genetic makeup. (See P. 11 for related article)

Electromagnetic Radiation being used in mind control experiments:

Elements within the US government and Military are experimenting with electromagnetic energy at low level in mind control and influence tests. These tests have been ongoing, and extend even to the placement of thoughts into subjects brains as if it were their own thoughts. Experiments also consist of crowd control and manipulation of moods and behavior for public manipulation and influence, as well as pain inducement methods.

Colorado Attorney General Signs Amicus Brief Supporting Second Amendment Incorporation!

Two-thirds of the nation's attorneys general have filed an amicus brief asking the U.S. Supreme Court to grant certiorari in the case of NRA v. Chicago and hold that the Second Amendment applies to state and local governments through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. This bi-partisan group of 33 attorneys general, along with the Attorney General of California in a separate filing, agrees with the NRA's position that the Second Amendment protects a fundamental individual right to keep and bear arms, disagreeing with the decision recently issued by a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Attorney General Suthers was one of the many who agrees that the Second Amendment is a fundamental individual right and signed the amicus brief. Please call Attorney General Suthers at (303) 866-4500 and thank him for standing up in support of the Second Amendment. You may also e-mail him at attorney.general@state.co.us.

Stop the Federalization of the Agricultural Industry

Last week The John Birch Society updated people on the Clean Water Restoration Act (S. 787) which would place virtually all waters of the United States under the control of the federal government. (This includes your well or pond, and all other bodies of water).

As if that is not enough, there is another bill in the House that would place federal control on much of the food industry.

Representative Rosa DeLauro (D-CT) introduced the Food Safety Modernization Act of 2009 (H.R. 875) on February 4, 2009. The bill, which currently carries 40 cosponsors, would effectively transfer all state control over food regulation to the Food Safety Administration (FSA), a newly established federal bureaucracy to be created within the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS).

It would very likely contribute to the eventual abandonment of all independent, family farms as well as all organic farming operations due to the

It's All Illegal

Americans - on their day of supposed "independence" - have no cause for celebration. Our country is being deliberately destroyed. It's all illegal.

1. We now have a third consecutive stolen national election with a man who took over the highest office in the land. He is, most probably, not a natural born American citizen. Where are Obama's REAL birth certificate, passport, and university grades? Every other American citizen supplies grades and proof of citizenship, when requested for jobs. What is Obama hiding?

2. A corrupt Congress (our Legislative branch) and Judiciary are in collusion in this huge cover-up. It's all illegal, according to the US Constitution.

3. Therefore, any and all Executive Orders (EO's) are null and void. Any laws passed by a complicit Congress and Judiciary are also Constitutionally illegal.

4. The US military is now stationed on US soil [plus how many other hired non-US mercenary troops that are not reported?]. Troops have not been stationed in the United States since the Civil War. It's illegal, according to the US Constitution.

5. 800 Secret FEMA/military detention concentration camps have been built around the United States using OUR taxpayer money, in order to silence and jail Americans who see what is really happening.

6. The military should be helping rebuild our country's wrecked and aged infrastructure, instead of waiting to pounce on innocent American citizens.

7. The United States is involved in three illegal wars. This has also bankrupted our country. Millions of Americans, Iraqis, Afghanis, and Pakistanis have been killed or maimed for life. Covert and illegal US operations are wrecking lives around the globe! Millions of American vets come home either in coffins or medically destroyed! For what?

8. The Fed is deliberately bankrupting our country. This is a private banking consortium, always meeting in secret to extract from us every last inflated, and now, worthless dollar a situation they created. The Fed is destroying our entire financial base. They have stolen TRILLIONS OF OUR TAXPAYER DOLLARS! These people are "citizens" of the United States; and yet they refuse to be held accountable, while they continue to steal our hard-earned money. The Constitution did not set up a private banking system. This is also illegal.

9. Meanwhile, millions of Americans are losing their homes, and there is no planned relief except for the rich. It's deliberate. Millions of Americans have lost their jobs, due to all this criminality. The real US unemployment figure is about 20%! This, too, is deliberate. Millions of Americans don't have enough food to eat daily.

10. The Constitutional checks and balances that our Founding Fathers set in place are now being deliberately manipulated, through illegal laws, to destroy our independence, for the criminality of a secret, elite, and military take over of our country, by the New World chaotic-Order.

11. There are now more than 10 years of dangerous and secret HAARP and Chemtrails Clandestine Weather Modification Programs that are destabilizing our planet's weather and entire web of life. People are being poisoned daily by these deadly aerosol assaults. There is no public debate or discussion. This is illegal and immoral!

12. The corporate-controlled mass media (radio, TV, and print) is aiding and abetting the dissemination of deliberate lies, by those public officials supposedly "in charge." Trivial Hollywood news has now replaced investigative reporting, enforcing a country-wide situation where Americans are poorly educated and badly informed. President Thomas Jefferson reminded us that real "information is the currency of democracy." Where is it?

13. There are credible reports that all Americans (over the age of three months) will be "forced" to take dangerous and untested influenza vaccines [possibly 3 shots, to make sure we're totally poisoned] created for some bio-engineered "swine flu" that was made in some bioweapons lab, and does not respond to any vaccine. The Big-Pharma companies, who are making these vaccines, have been indemnified by the US government.

This means, when people die or are disabled as a result of being forced to taking these shots, that the drug companies are free-and-clear from any accountability. The drug companies have a long and sordid history of marketing unsafe pharmaceuticals. Meanwhile, they will make millions and millions of dollars, pounds, and euros to poison millions of people. This is corporate, out-of control greed, at any and all expense! Greed has replaced Safety and Ethics.

In the 1770s, there were 13 original colonies who joined together to pave way for our new country, independent of monarchical tyranny and "dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" (Lincoln's words). This is now being destroyed by corporate elite and government insiders.

The 13 issues cited above are all high crimes. These crimes are against our own Constitutional laws, the Nuremberg Trials laws, the Geneva Conventions. Where is accountability, as our country is wrecked daily?

On this fourth of July, we have nothing to celebrate! Our Constitution is being deliberately shredded, while most citizens are not informed about what is REALLY happening. United, we stand together. We are now being Divided, without full disclosure or truth.

Americans, WAKE UP. There are PEACEFUL SOLUTIONS TO THIS INSIDER CORRUPTION.

(1) Our taxes are paying for all these illegal laws. If millions of us do not pay taxes to support bankrupt corporations and their CEO's outrageous salaries, then these criminals do not have any financial base from which to plunder us any further.

(2) Create REAL alternative political parties: Real Greens, Real Independents, and other new parties who will work for our "Common Good." Vote all the officials out of office and hold them legally accountable for all their crimes. Have real voting checks, so there are no more fraudulent and rigged outcomes. Congressional seats were not supposed to be a lifetime job. Lobbyists are bankrolling these seats. Congress is working for lobbyists and corporations, not us.

Truth? Justice? They are part of our Constitution; and we can reclaim this awesome document that has guided us for more than 200 years. We can reclaim our Constitutional Rights peacefully! There are millions of courageous US citizens who can help bring our country back to honor and safety

Splicing Drugs Into Plants-Dangers of GE Pharming

"PHARMING" HOLDS PROMISE, BUT ALSO DANGERS

By Katherine Stapp - NEW YORK, NY

Edible vaccines and spermicide made from plants that contain human genes could someday save lives and help prevent overpopulation, but watchdog groups are worried about the repercussions if genetic material from these crops gets loose in the food chain.

Animals like mice and gerbils typically have been used to produce human antibodies -- proteins that fight disease -- but the refining process in vats called "bioreactors" is still expensive and inefficient, and is vulnerable to viral and bacterial contamination.

Some scientists see greater promise in plants, which are not affected by human diseases and could produce antibodies at costs up to 100 times less than traditional cell fermentation. Several companies are growing crops that have been engineered to produce human antibodies to diseases like Hepatitis B and malaria -- or even to sperm, in what the press has dubbed "contraceptive corn." The San Diego-based company Epicyte hopes to begin clinical trials of a topical spermicide made from genetically modified (GMO) corn this year. It currently has one crop growing in a greenhouse in Indiana and a second stage is planned in Hawaii, said Sandy Strauss, Epicyte's spokesperson.

"We're following all the (federal) guidelines," Strauss said. "The chance is almost nil (that there would be inadvertent cross- pollination), but I can't say 100 percent, because one never knows."

This is exactly what makes environmental groups like Greenpeace nervous. "There has been reportage of widespread contamination (by GMO crops) in Mexico and that was something that was predicted could never happen -- and it's happened to a rather extreme degree," said Craig Culp, the GMO media coordinator for Greenpeace.

The contraceptive corn is not yet in open field trials, which is usually the point at which Greenpeace actively opposes such experimental research. Last September, the group staged a protest in California, where a company was growing rice outdoors that had been spliced with human genes. Greenpeace says some 20 companies worldwide are engaged in this kind of "pharming."

"We are very much aware of this," Culp said of the contraceptive corn. "It's a pretty terrifying scenario that this could get into regular corn and end up in someone's cornflakes."

"Open field trials are inherently a danger to the natural environment. Buffer zones (a barrier of regular crops surrounding the GM crops) are absolutely insufficient," he added. "Even if they're miles wide, there's simply no way to contain it; genetic material can be carried by the wind, pollen, insects, seed matter, animal faeces and birds. There are lots of ways this genetic material can escape contained zones."

The technology, termed "plantibodies" by Epicyte, has a long way to go before hitting the market. Some experts caution it is too early to judge its usefulness or the hazards it may present. "Biotech has changed the way we think about plants," said Michael Rodemeyer, executive director of the Washington-based Pew Initiative on Food and Biotechnology, an independent research group that takes a neutral position on biotechnology.

"Corn is a wonderful protein factory that could be of value for pharmaceuticals, diagnostics, and industrial applications," Rodemeyer said. "Plants are a renewable resource, with environmental and energy advantages. This technology may offer a way to do things that couldn't be done otherwise."

Still, he said, "as we've seen with the Starlink case, there are concerns that genetic traits could drift to other organisms." In 2000, a brand of GMO corn known as Starlink that had only been approved for animal feed somehow found its way into numerous food products in the United States, including taco shells and tortilla chips. Allegations that Starlink caused allergic reactions in some people prompted more than 300 product recalls and raised questions about the efficacy of government regulation of GMO products.

"The question is how do we make sure that the (GMO) versions -- particularly for non-food uses -- do not get into the food crops, and that's something the regulatory agencies here are looking at," Rodemeyer said. Gene Laos, the chief executive of a Texas-based company called Prodigene that is experimenting with plant-based vaccines, said its cost-effectiveness could be a boon for poorer countries.

"It will definitely benefit the underdeveloped countries, since the carrier for the antigen would be a seed," he said. "Although edible vaccines have to be administered by a doctor, other factors -- transportation, refrigeration -- are negated for poor countries, as well as the cost of needles and other supplies."

"We've had a vaccine stored in a corn seed for five years without degradation," he added. Prodigene has two products about to go into clinical trials -- a hepatitis B vaccine and one that fights the bacteria known as e. coli.

Ultimately, Rodemeyer said, "it's hard to make predictions (about how beneficial this technology could be for the developing world). What's important is do it in a safe, effective and affordable way."

Editor's Note:

It is amazing the depth of stupidity and schemes humankind descends to. If they can't force people to take dangerous vaccinations overtly, why not put it into food so we don't have a choice other than starving. How about involuntary population control... or depopulation techniques? We have people playing God... interfering with the natural system and its rules. Where does the agenda end? How about creating fake foods that not only slowly starve humans, but also contribute to disease promotion and development?

Where those in power actually believe the earth should only contain 500 million people, you MUST have a mechanism through which to kill off as many people as possible, prevent most from reproducing, and then use traditional population control methods such as wars, and likely deliberate biological development and contamination of our environment.

This is all the more reason to support organic food production, and to avoid fake foods which only contribute to poor health and the business of disease development and management... a trillion dollar industry...make people sick, and then develop methods to treat the results. Do we see the connections between cause and effect... between agendas and results, not only in health, but in finances, freedom, rights and life itself? We have an enemy people... and we had better understand who and what it is or we will be a casualty for certain.

Control of food, control of food quality, control of who eats what and when... along with removal of rights and freedoms...and you have slavery completed. The enemy is degrading human life, and creating an elite who plan to rule over all nations and peoples... the evidence is abundantly clear but will we do anything to change this agenda?

SPIRITUAL LIBERATION, the Movie, is coming to the ABBEY THEATRE in Durango & the LIBERTY THEATRE in Pagosa Springs this summer. This powerful movie is based on the life and teachings of visionary Michael Bernard Beckwith, founder and spiritual director of Agape International Spiritual Center in California. This new film was inspired by the best selling book of the same name and provides an intimate, behind the scenes look at Beckwith's daily spiritual journey, along with interviews featuring top holistic teachers and innovators. It includes original "Sound of Agape" music by Rickie Byars Beckwith, Tim McAfee-Lewis and the world-renowned Agape International Choir. Interwoven with interviews, documentary footage, spiritual lessons and more, Dr. Beckwith's simple yet profound messages are illuminated and explored in this powerful and compelling feature.

Sponsored by the Four Corners Center for Spiritual Living in Durango, the film will be shown at the ABBEY THEATRE on July 29 and August 8 and the LIBERTY THEATRE in Pagosa on August 17. Music videos will begin at 6:00 PM, with the movie from 6:30-8:30 PM. Advance tickets are recommended and can be purchased for $10 ($12 at the door) at the theaters, Maria's Bookshop in Durango, Pathways in Bayfield, Satori Boutique in Pagosa Springs, and Zuma Natural Foods in Mancos. A ticket will also provide a $5 discount on each: a DVD of the movie and the book Spiritual Liberation: Fulfilling Your Soul's Purpose. For information, call 970-247-2221.

The Four Corners Center for Spiritual Living is based on new thought / ancient wisdom teachings. Gatherings are open to the public and place on the second and fourth Sunday's each month at the Durango Recreation Center from 4:00-5:30 PM. Facilitated by Karen Lovelien, the center offers guest speakers, study of the practical application of spiritual principles, and great music featuring local singer song-writer Cheryl White and other inspiring music. False Christianity, False Beliefs!

By Daniel Lyon

There's a saying - "Someone who is deceived, doesn't know they are deceived, or they wouldn't be deceived." Deception is a subtle and profoundly difficult thing to see through. It usually takes some "in-your-face" confrontation or wake up call to alert us to the possible fact that we could be deceived about something.

The Southwest Free Press has been sounding the alarm for months on multiple issues where deception plays a great part, and many are waking up to the facts, and are no longer deceived.

Politics is a touchy area... and a hard thing to admit wrong in, and where great damage is being done because so many won't face the truth.

In religion... it is much worse. The vested interest we've had in religion simply doesn't allow us (without a love for the truth regardless of what that means to our belief system) to admit wrong, or that we wasted such time and resources in false concepts.

The Bible is the book which all of Christianity - 1.2 billion people - base their beliefs on. It is the definitive authority, claiming to be the very words of the Universal Supreme creator in written form as instructions for humanity as to whom and what God is, what this force is doing and where humanity is going on this physical journey. While there are varying beliefs within different Christian sects, the core beliefs remain constant.

If we believe there really is a true God, and that He is capable of communicating His thoughts to us, despite naysayers who claim the original Bible has been perverted by "interpretations" over the millennia, then we have no choice but to prove that Bible, prove the words within it and put the pieces of the puzzle together.

But what happens when we find a conflict between what people believe about God and the Bible, and what the Bible actually says? Do we discard the actual words in the Bible and go with popular belief and traditions, or do we allow the Bible to teach us exactly what it says and follow those instruction?

One of the most often mentioned warnings in the Bible is that of false religion, but not the type of false religion most would consider false. Christ Himself spoke of a false "christian" religion, one that sounded good, looked good and seemed good, but was, in fact, deceptive:

Matthew 24:5 "For many will come in My name, saying, 'I am the Christ,' and will deceive many." NKJV

Most read this scripture and believe it is speaking about people coming who claim to "be" the Christ, but this is not what Christ is warning about here. However, remember that punctuation was not part of the original manuscripts, so the commas are misleading...

Try this: "For many will come in My name, saying I am the Christ, and will deceive many."

Christ was telling people that "many" would come... in His name.. and telling people that He, Jesus, is the Christ. This isn't saying that "many" people would be claiming "they" were the Christ, but that Jesus is the Christ... the Lord... "do you know Jesus..." and what did He warn would be involved with that "Christian" message?

He simply stated that this would be part of deceiving many utilizing a message "about" Him and even practicing things that seem right, but aren't...

Matt 7:21 "Not everyone who says to Me, 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of My Father in heaven. :22 Many will say to Me in that day, 'Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Your name, cast out demons in Your name, and done many wonders in Your name?' :23 And then I will declare to them, 'I never knew you; depart from Me, you who practice lawlessness!'" NKJV

Do you realize what Christ is stating here? These "many" (the same "many" who would hear a christian message and yet be deceived?) are practicing the form of Christianity they were taught by those coming in Christ's name, (ministers, pastors, evangelists...) teaching that He is the Christ, etc., and yet Christ didn't know them and told them that they were practicing lawlessness.

Luke 6:46 "But why do you call Me 'Lord, Lord,' and not do the things which I say?" NKJV

Even in Christ's time, there were those who called Him Lord, and yet they were practicing something different than what Christ taught or expected.

Rev 6:2 "And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given to him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer." NKJV.

The white horse here, and it's rider, are the first of the 4 horseman. Many people assume this is discussing Christ Himself, because of Rev 19:11, but this is not correct:

Rev 19:11 "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war." NKJV.

The first white horse is representative of a false Christianity... something that resembles what many have been led to believe is Christ and His teachings, but isn't. This is a shock for many to consider at first, but there are many other scriptures which discuss this topic.

So the serious question to ask is, how do we know whether we are being deceived by a message that sounds "Christian?" How do we protect ourselves from being deceived, because, remember, someone who is deceived doesn't realize it and sincerely believes that what they believe, is true?

Where do we start to touch on this false Christianity... this false teaching about Christ and the Father's plan for humanity?

Let's start with a simple, but widely accepted Christian doctrine... "saved people go to heaven when they die." OK... let's look at what Christ said about this:

John 3:13 "No one has ascended to heaven but He who came down from heaven, that is, the Son of Man who is in heaven." NKJV

Acts 2:34 "For David is not ascended into the heavens..."

What? Christ Himself states clearly that "no one has ascended into heaven," not even David... yet most Christians believe that there are many people, right now, in heaven, to which the "good" go after they die, or in hell, where the "bad" go when they die. So what do we believe? How do we rectify this conflict? Let's look further...

Ecc1 9: 5 "For the living know that they will die; But the dead know nothing..." NKJV.

Psalm 6:5 :For in death [there is] no remembrance of you: in the grave who shall give you thanks?" NKJV .

When a person dies, they are asleep, unconscious, having no awareness at all, awaiting the only thing that can bring them back to life... the Resurrection. Consider; If people go to heaven or "hell" immediately after they die, why is there so much talk of a "resurrection?" If people have already been judged, and received their rewards, what need is there for a resurrection "to life" if they are already "alive" somewhere in heaven or hell?

What did Christ say about death? Remember the story of Lazarus? Christ waited for Lazarus to actually die before He went to him. Four days dead, but what did Christ say of the "state" Lazarus was in?

John 11:11 "'Our friend Lazarus sleeps, but I go that I may wake him up.' :12 Then His disciples said, 'Lord, if he sleeps he will get well.' :13 However, Jesus spoke of his death, but they thought that He was speaking about taking rest in sleep. :14 Then Jesus said to them plainly, 'Lazarus is dead.'" NKJV.

Christ called death a "sleep." Why would He identify someone who is dead as "asleep" if they are awake in heaven or hell?

Mark 5:39 "When He came in, He said to them, 'Why make this commotion and weep? The child is not dead, but sleeping.' :40 And they ridiculed Him." NKJV.

These people clearly knew what dead was and this 12 year old girl was indeed dead, but Christ, once again, called it a sleep. The girl was not in heaven or hell... she was simply dead... unconscious, and Christ "woke" her from death... brought her back to conscious life.

1 Cor 15:51 "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed - :52 in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the

1. What if I had told you in October 2008, before the last presidential election, that before Barack Obama's first 100 days in office, the federal government would be in control of both the mortgage and the banking industries?

That 19 of America's largest banks would be forced to undergo "stress tests" by the federal government which would determine that they were "insufficiently capitalized" so they must be supervised by the government? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

2. What if I had told you that within Barack Obama's first 100 days in office the federal government would be the largest shareholder in the US Big Three automakers – Ford, GM, and Chrysler? That the government would kick out the CEO's of these companies and appoint hand-picked executives with zero experience in the auto industry and that executive compensation would be determined not by a Board of Directors but by the government? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

3. What if I had told you that Barack Obama would appoint 21 "Czars", without congressional approval, accountable only to him – not to the voters – who would have control over a wide range of US policy decisions? That there would be a Stimulus Accountability Czar, an Urban Czar, a Compensation Czar, an Iran Czar, an Auto Industry Czar, a Cyber Security Czar, an Energy Czar, a Bank Bailout Czar, and more than a dozen other government bureaucrats with unchecked regulatory powers over US domestic and foreign policy? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

4. What if I had told you that the federal deficit would be $915 billion in the first six months of the Obama presidency - with a projected annual deficit of $1.75 trillion - triple the $454.8 billion in 2008, for which the previous administration was highly criticized by Obama and his fellow Democrats? That congress would pass Obama's $3.53 trillion federal budget for fiscal 2010? That the projected deficit over the next ten years would be greater than $10 trillion? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

5. What if I had told you that the Obama Justice Department would order FBI agents to read Miranda rights to high-value detainees captured on the battlefield and held at US military detention facilities in Afghanistan? That Obama would order the closing of the Guantanamo detention facility with no plan for the disposition of the 200-plus individuals held there? That several of the suspected terrorists at Guantanamo would be sent to live in freedom in Bermuda at the expense of the US government? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

6. What if I had told you that the federal government would seek powers to seize key companies whose failures could "jeopardize the financial system?" That a new regulatory agency would be proposed by Obama to control loans, credit cards, mortgage-backed securities, and other financial products offered to the public? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

7. What if I had told you that Obama would travel to the Middle East, bow before the Saudi king, and repeatedly apologize for America's past actions? That he would travel to Latin America where he would warmly greet Venezuela's strongman Hugo Chavez and sit passively in the audience while Nicaraguan Marxist thug Daniel Ortega charged America with terrorist aggression in Central America? Would you have said, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

8. Okay, now what if I were to tell you that Obama wants to dismantle conservative talk radio through the imposition of a new "Fairness Doctrine?" That he wants to curtail the First Amendment rights of those who may disagree with his policies via internet blogs, cable news networks, or advocacy ads? Would you say, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

9. What if I were to tell you that the Obama Justice Department wants to limit your Second Amendment rights to keep and bear arms? That the federal government wants to reinstate the so-called "assault weapons" ban which would prohibit the sale of any type of firearm that requires the shooter to pull the trigger every time a round is fired? That Obama's Attorney General wants to eliminate the sale of virtually all handguns, which most citizens choose for self-defense? Would you say, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

10. What if I were to tell you that the Obama plan is to eliminate states' rights guaranteed by the Tenth Amendment and give the federal government sweeping new powers over policies currently under the province of local and state governments and voted on by the people? That Obama plans to control the schools, energy production, the environment, health care, and the wealth of every US citizen? Would you say, "C'mon, that will never happen in America?"

11. What if I would tell you that the Obama administration would ignore the law and fire an Inspector General as he was getting too close to malfeasance of one of his supporters. He also ignored the law which requires that any dismissing of an Inspector General would require thirty days notice and would require specific reasons for the firing.

12. What if I told you that Congressman Conyers, MI, whose committee was about to investigate ACORN (what do you know about ACORN?) was told to cease. The reasons he could give the media is that the "Powers Above" told him to stop the investigation. (Hmmm ...& you probably thought he was doing the peoples business!)

13. What if I told you that Obama thinks "transparency" is not required of him. That our next presidential election may look similar to the one recently held in Iran? I know, I know what you say, "That will never happen in America."

14. What if I were to tell you that the president, the courts, and the federal government have ignored the US Constitution and have seized powers which the founders of our country fought to restrict? That our last presidential election may have been our last truly free election.

15. What if I told you that this is NOT a Democrat/Republican party issue (both have helped to paint this picture!).... More to the point...so has "voter apathy!"

Preparing for Civil Unrest - By Claire Wolfe

The most remarkable thing about civil unrest is that there hasn't been more of it.

Politicians are making a hash of this country—and much of the rest of the civilized world. We know it. They know it. They know we know it. But we don't feel we can do anything much to stop them.

That right there is the pre-condition for civil unrest—when people are frustrated and politicians are nervous.

Worse, that was how things stood before last fall's crash. Before polls on both left and right launched the biggest mass transfer of wealth in history—transferring our wealth (what we had left of it!) to their friends on Wall Street and in the banking industry. In other words, that's how things were before things got bad!

Now everybody's talking about the ongoing catastrophe (even if we are in a momentarily sunny mood). But almost nobody is talking about the logical—maybe even inevitable—consequences of cynical or desperate politicians abusing an already fed-up populace: civil unrest.

I mean people taking to the streets. Or mass resistance. Or crackdowns because the government fears we might do something to upset its apple cart. It's going to happen. Somewhere. At some time. It's going to.

One of the few VIPs to mention the matter openly was Zbigniew Brzezinski, former National Security Advisor and the ultimate insider's insider. He commented on the millions of unemployed or soon-to-be-unemployed and the "...public awareness of this extraordinary wealth that was transferred to a few individuals at levels without historical precedent in America." He told "Morning Joe" Scarborough, "Hell, there could be even riots." I'd say that's an understatement.

Although few in power are talking about it, rumors abound that governments at many levels are planning for civil unrest. One rumor is about a document supposedly being circulated right now among top federal officials. It's called the "C&R Document"—with C&R standing for "conflict & revolution." The much-storied paper is said to be a plan for controlling the American people when we get out of hand. True? Who knows. But the very rumor tells us a lot about these times.

Other things are not mere rumor. When the federal government established a North American Army command in 2002, its purpose wasn't to repel foreign invaders. It was domestic operations—something long and rightly forbidden by the Posse Comitatus Act. In February of 2009, when military commanders in Canada and the U.S. signed a pact allowing their armies to operate inside each other's country they didn't even bother to get authorization from Congress—an illegal and unprecedented move. And once again, the purpose was handling "domestic civil emergencies."

For several years, the Centers for Disease Control tried to get states to adopt something called the Model State Emergency Health Powers Act (MEHPA). This act would allow state governments to become police-state dictatorships in event of any ill-defined health emergency—vaccinating people by force, destroying or seizing property without compensation, and rationing medical supplies, food, and fuel. To their credit, most state governments rejected the act. A few adopted portions of it before a fervent opposition campaign caused the CDC to back off. However, the concept of a health dictatorship hasn't gone away. Not hardly. Within days of the news that a new strain of swine flu had arisen in Mexico in April 2009, states were again considering legislation to give themselves martial-law powers in event of an epidemic.

And what of the dozens and dozens of federal agencies that now have SWAT teams? Seriously, what justifies the Bureau of Land Management or the Department of Housing and Urban Development having paramilitary units?

Now maybe you like the idea of an Army that watches over its own citizens. Maybe it makes sense to have a government seize total dictatorial power in event of a health emergency. Maybe you believe SWAT teams will never be used except against bad guys. But do you really trust these people?

After all, these are the same folks, and this is the same mentality, that not only spent $325,000 to produce a souvenir photo of a presidential 747 zooming low over the Statue of Liberty, but ordered the New York Police Department, the FBI, the Secret Service, and the New York mayor's office not to tell the public. Never mind that they realized full well that passenger jets and military planes plunging low over Manhattan would evoke panic.

Still, peace reigns. Mostly. At least here in North America. But not everywhere. Not long ago, France was brought to its knees by night after night of rioting. In that country it's become almost common for workers to hold their bosses hostage in hopes of winning economic concessions. Greece, too, saw its normal life and business shut down by days of rioting. So did Iceland—a country that's normally the picture of civility.

Can the U.S. be forever immune?

It might not take much—and it could be something out of the blue, something impossible to anticipate—to set us against each other and against the "Trust us; we'll fix it" political crowd.

In a way, this national silence on a matter so many people are afraid of is similar to the silence about general preparedness issues before 9-11 or Hurricane Katrina. Only Mormons and us wingnuts spoke of preparedness way back when. Since then, of course, advice on preparedness is mainstream and common.

In another sense, this silence is different. Because when unrest finally erupts, it's not going to be us merely taking care of ourselves. It's going to be "us against them." It might be workers against bosses. Or the poor against bankers. Or blacks against Hispanics. Or little folk against Big Men in public office. Or farmers against the USDA. Or xenophobes against xenophiles. But however it happens, the implications aren't as Boy-Scoutish as just taking care of ourselves in an emergency.

Defining civil unrest!

Look up "preparations for civil unrest" on Google and...What's that echo I hear?—you'll find nothing that's going to help you. In fact, you won't even easily turn up a good definition of what civil unrest is.

Like "indecency," the definition seems to be in the eye of the beholder.

I wouldn't consider a peaceful anti-war march to be civil unrest, for instance, but a police chief might. Similarly, I wouldn't consider acts of localized non-violent lawbreaking (like environmental activists chaining themselves to a tree) to be civil unrest; but a timber company official probably believes otherwise.

Civil unrest occurs when anger, frustration, or fear turn disruptive on a mass scale. Or when government officials crack down because they anticipate such disruptions. Crackdowns can lead to further frustration, leading to further crackdowns and so on—especially when the crackdowns look unwarranted and tyrannical.

In other words, civil unrest can arise from the anger of people or the folly of government or both together.

Anger over an unpopular policy, a new war, a collapse of the currency, panic over a pandemic, a food shortage, a bank run—anything like that could cause civil unrest, especially in a population that's already on edge and no longer trusts its authority figures.

Another thing you won't find via Google is how various types or levels of unrest are likely to affect us and how we should respond, if we're affected. Again, although the men and women at the top are quite concerned for their own sakes, they (and their media mouthpieces) would rather not talk about what we should do

ARCHULETA COUNTY CLUB REPORTS

The Archuleta County Law Club

The Law Club met July 7th & 20th. Topics were foreclosures, and methods to stop them in their tracks, property taxes, and reports on further law information obtained, the 5 elements of criminal fraud, Rules of Evidence, and case law on Causes of Actions needing to have an "injured party" in fact, Grand Jury details, separation of powers routine violations, and court watching. The next Law Club meeting will be Monday, July 27th, at the ??? at 6:30.

The Archuleta County Guard (ACG)

The Guard met on July 14th. In light of the huge amount of legal issues coming to light, and the fact that much of any groups power is in knowing what the law actually says and how to use it, the Guard decided to focus mostly on Law Club issues which were time sensitive, and which were good lessons.

Topics of discussion were court "Objections," Concealed Carry weapons certification trainer presentation, Grand Jury facts and contacts, and general legal issues and answers.

The ACG was recently called by a local citizen, Warren Goodman, telling of how Chris Crump, the local Animal Control officer, was trespassing on his property in response to an alleged complaint that one of his dogs approached a woman and her daughter while walking on the road near his property. Mr. Crump was attempting to search this property for animal control violations, but had no warrant to legally do so. Mr. Crump left the property, but showed up on Warren's mother's property where Mr. Goodman and his dogs were driven to by Mrs. Goodman.

Within a short time, Mr. Crump drove upon this property, got out and began searching around once again, without a warrant. At one point, Mr. Crump approached with a stick in his hands, provoking the dogs, and then claimed the dogs would have attacked him without it.

The guard member on the phone told Mr. Goodman to tell Mr. Crump that he was trespassing and that he needed a warrant to be there, but Mr. Crump stated, "he doesn't know what he is talking about." Mr. Crump was told to leave multiple times, and refused to leave, wherein the guard member contacted other guard members, dialed 911 to report the trespass and arrival of the ACG, and drove out to the property.

Along with Mr. Crump's vehicle, were all three on duty deputy vehicles, and then Sheriff Pete Gonzalez drove up as well. Video and audio were being taken of this entire event, and the Sheriff was placed on notice that he was in violation of the law, to which he simply waved his hand and dismissed the warning. Three Deputies were accomplices to this criminal action, and stood by as Mr. Crump then proceeded to issue an illegally presented Summons. All this was not only a violation of Mr. Goodman's Due Process rights, but was a breach of these officers' Oath of Office to uphold not only the US Constitution, but the Colorado Constitution and Statutes.

Three more ACG members arrived within 10 minutes, and were witnesses to this, and a fifth just after the officers all left. There will be continued follow-up on this and other similar illegal conduct being performed under the color of law by our public servants.

Why were all on duty Deputies, along with the Sheriff, needed for this event? Why leave all of the County without deputies, just to deal with a minor issue? Likely because it was an illegal search, and trespass, and they wanted to protect their activities. The video, along with 911 records are self explanatory... the lawlessness being accepted and practiced in this county under the color of law, must, and will, end. Next Archuleta County Guard meeting will be Monday, July 27th, 6:30 at the same location as the Law Club meeting.

in event of civil panic.

But that's not good enough for we independent-minded people, is it?

Here are my definitions of levels of civil unrest and a little bit about how they might affect us:

LEVEL ONE: The lowest level of civil unrest is when people turn on their own neighborhoods—as happened during the race riots of the 1960s and the Rodney King riots in Los Angeles. Level One civil unrest can be deadly and destructive, but primarily to people who live, work, or must travel in the immediate area. Level One unrest is spontaneous, Dionysian, is confined to a narrow geographical zone where the protestors live. Police response may be harsh, but it's localized. Unless you're in the middle of it, you're unaffected.

LEVEL TWO: Level Two civil unrest may also be focused on a single area. But in this case, rioters or protesters have deliberately targeted a business district, a facility, a transportation system, or an organization to impose maximum disruption. One example: the World Trade Organization protests in Seattle in 1999; young people with violence in mind and rage in their hearts attacked an entire downtown, affecting hundreds of businesses and tens of thousands of workers who hardly knew what hit them. Another example: This spring, protesters in Thailand shut down the Bangkok airport, affecting who knows how many individuals and businesses. Level Two unrest is usually planned or semi-planned. The target is chosen deliberately. Although still focused in one area, Level Two can disrupt normal life and business in a whole region or country.

LEVEL THREE: Level Three comes when mass unrest or authoritarian crackdown causes disruption at state or regional level. Then, no matter what the original cause or location of the trouble, everyone in the region is affected. Effects might include travel restrictions, random ID checks, mass arrests, food and fuel rationing, controls on money and banking, roadblocks, and other harsh "emergency" restrictions.

LEVEL FOUR: Level Four is Level Three—but on a national or even international scale. It's martial law. If things ever get this bad, it's likely that the government itself will be a far bigger threat to everyone's well being than whatever the original cause of the clampdown was.

And of course, any level of civil unrest can lead to laws, regulations, and harsher police policies that end up affecting everybody in the long run.

Yes, it can involve us!

We make a mistake if we think civil unrest is strictly an urban phenomena. It can happen anywhere. When 400 government agents and soldiers descended on one isolated family in the Idaho mountains, the roadblocks, helicopters, Humvees, media presence, and furious protestors surrounded the Randy Weaver family and brought the normal life of Boundary County, Idaho, to a halt. The siege against the Branch Davidian church in Waco, Texas, wasn't conducted in the inner-city, either. Yet both of these were large scale catastrophes with all the hallmarks of civil unrest—individuals or groups resisting, government insisting.

I can easily envision strictly rural-based unrest that urban dwellers will never even hear about (except perhaps in highly distorted reports). What happens, for instance, if farmers, 4H families, owners of saddle horses, and holders of small chicken flocks decide to resist en masse the National Animal Identification System (NAIS)? It's easy to imagine, in these crazy days, USDA SWAT teams descending on the countryside to make arrests, forcibly register or destroy non-compliant animals, and burn down non-registered facilities.

The future could see rural resistance to invasive census-taking, forced vaccination programs, land takings, water-rights policies, or the destruction of herds for real or bogus health reasons. As country people increasingly see governments as foreign organizations driven by the interests of city dwellers, pharmaceutical companies, and mega-agri--business, it wouldn't surprise me.

If we ever have serious food shortages, expect rural areas to be besieged.

Even when civil unrest confines itself to the cities, airports, or highways it can affect us in crazy ways. Here's a funny example of unpredictable (in this case mild) consequences. A friend was due to have her first book published in Canada. She was very excited—then disappointed when weeks dragged by and the book didn't appear. Turns out that a band of Indians was blocking a highway bridge the printer's truck had to cross. The union truckers, in solidarity, refused to route around the protest. Just one small consequence. But you can see the unpredictability.

The simple truth is that we don't know what kinds of unrest to anticipate. We don't know when, or if, we'll see civil unrest. But thinking about the problem and preparing ourselves mentally and physically to deal with it should be just another aspect of our personal preparedness.

What we can do!

1. Keep standard emergency preps up to date. First thing to do is make sure all our typical household preparedness supplies and plans are current.

shortage (or something has driven city people out into the countryside), prepare to protect your resources day and night. Here again neighbors can do each other valuable services, like taking shifts guarding fields, barns, private roads, and gardens. Yes, this is an apocalyptic scenario. Not a likely one. But if it happens, it's a Level Three or Level Four emergency—delivered to your own front yard.

6. Get advance word on local conditions when traveling. We're used to hopping into our vehicles or onto airplanes and going wherever we want to go. But as the worldwide economy deteriorates, it's wise to keep an eye on our destination. Right now, this warning pertains more to overseas travel than jaunts within the U.S. If you plan to go abroad, visit online sites like Travelfish.org. They'll have bulletins about adverse conditions in areas you plan to visit; you may even be able to receive alerts via email that will warn you about anything from political protests to disease outbreaks in places you plan to go.

7. Watch for signs of trouble when in an unfamiliar area. Sometimes the only advance notice you get is the notice your own senses give you. When walking, driving, biking, or otherwise traveling in unfamiliar places, stay in what gunfolk call "condition yellow." This is different than the meaningless colored threat levels the Department of Homeland Security puts out. It just means "be alert!" Never simply allow yourself to slouch along obliviously. Always be aware of who's nearby and what's going on around you. If you spot trouble developing, turn. Avoid it if at all possible.

8. If you stumble into a "hot zone" of unrest, be prepared to think on your feet. Not many people are qualified to give you advice about how to behave if you unavoidably find yourself in the midst of trouble—a riot, a mass protest that suddenly engulfs your familiar downtown, a spot where police are bashing heads or hurling tear gas seemingly at random. That's because not many people have ever been there and every catastrophe is different. If street-level chaos surrounds you, do your best to keep a cool head, move away from the worst of it if you get the chance, and get inside if possible.

9. If you're swept up in mass arrests during a riot or demonstration, the officers probably aren't going to be listening to your protestations of being an innocent bystander. You'll only tick them off and possibly get a charge of resisting arrest. The best advice I've received from my friends who've been busted during out-of-hand protests: Go along as best you can. Usually, all charges in such cases are either dropped or reduced once calm is restored. Only if we've reached the extreme point where police are rounding people up and throwing them into detention camps, or "disappearing" them, is fighting cops on the street likely to be worth it; then...fight like a demon.

10. Have a good lawyer and carry his or her card with you. Once again, in the heat of chaos it may not do you much good. But that card will come in handy later. Besides, if you and a police officer have an encounter in calmer circumstances, a lawyer's card, along with your calm assertion of your legal rights, will help you to be taken seriously. Police officers are like anybody else; they're more likely to go after easy targets than ones who are obviously knowledgeable and prepared. My lawyer has a helpful little list on the back of his card of the things you should do—nor not do when accosted by a police officer. I'd trust that more than my own nerves in a tight situation.

11. Be careful of roadblocks. This is a hard one. If we reach Level Three or Four of unrest, we may not only see the obnoxious police "checkpoints" we're burdened with today. We might also see two other things. One would be expanded police roadblocks, with warrantless searches, harsh questioning, and possibly mass arrests. Another could be "freelance" roadblocks—roadblocks set up by anybody from political protesters to

As BHM readers know, backup food, water, and other supplies are our mainstay for everything from bad storms to long-term unemployment, from power outages to social breakdowns. During civil unrest, especially at Level Three or Four, we might not be able to get out to buy things we need—or we might consider it more prudent to stay at home. On the other hand, if we ourselves are part of the unrest, we may need those supplies to sit out a siege.

2. Don't fall into foolish complacency. We who live in the country tend to have an "it can't happen here" attitude toward political violence or social upheaval. We see those things as urban phenomena. And mostly, they are. But there's no ironclad rule that says they have to be. If anything disrupts the supply chain, for instance, rural areas could be the first to be cut off from food, medicines, fuel, or other necessities. If government breaks down to the point where it can't deliver food stamps, housing vouchers, social security, or bureaucrats' pay, the rural poor and unemployed could become just as restive as their urban counterparts.

3. Watch your health. As I write this, the airwaves are shrilling about swine flu. This outbreak may fizzle; after all, perfectly normal flu kills many every year without causing panic, martial law, or incessant media coverage. On the other hand, it's certain that one day some illness will rampage across the globe. Few things inspire public panic more quickly than contagious disease, and once again rural areas are not immune. Take all the standard recommended precautions like frequent handwashing. Make sure your preparedness kit includes surgical masks and disposable gloves as well as a selection of frequently updated medications. And be ready to lay low at home for a long time in the event a serious plague gets loose.

4. Make common cause with your neighbors. I've said it before, but establishing a strong bond with people in your community—right now—is vital to every sort of emergency preparedness. In event of a Level One or Two emergency, these are the folks who could come to your house to make sure you're okay. They might give you a ride out or a place to sleep if you accidentally end up in a "hot zone" of riot or protest. In a deeper or more long-term emergency, they could pool resources with you to make supply runs. They can advise you if they've spotted a roadblock. They might let you cross their land to avoid a route that has become dangerous.

5. If you grow crops or raise food animals and the unrest is due to a food highwaymen. (Just as gangs of home invaders now masquerade as SWAT teams, highwaymen might masquerade as government officials to rob the unwary.) If it's humanly possible, avoid roadblocks. It's not illegal to turn away from them, as long as you don't disobey any traffic laws. Police do consider it suspicious behavior and may come after you, even if you've done nothing wrong; but in a time of civil unrest, avoiding a roadblock could save your skin. Of course, both police and freelancers will set up their blockades to make them as hard as possible to avoid—all the more reason to be alert, know where roadblocks are likely to be, and have a mental map of alternate routes. If, in a time and place of unrest, you're in a line approaching a roadblock, watch what happens to the people ahead of you. If you see any sign that the motorists ahead are being abused, get out of there.

So far, we've talked mostly as if civil unrest is something apart from us—something we might have to be wary of, something we might stumble accidentally into. But the fact is that as our country becomes less free, we might of course be the civil unrest. We might resist having our premises tagged for NAIS or having our herds slaughtered for real or bogus health reasons. We might end up fighting evictions (as farmers and many rural dwellers have for centuries during hard times). We might be the ones who say, "Hell no, we won't go!" when the mobile vaccination van comes to town, or the ones who try to keep our neighbors from being rounded up and sent to camps. Times are uncertain. We simply don't know.

But in every case, preparedness, foreknowledge, and a cool head will come in handy. Some of us already have lines in the sand that would inspire us to resist abuses of authority. And that, right there, is something our would-be masters fear—our disobedience. What will happen? And when? Nobody has a crystal ball. But the combination of public frustration and governmental apprehension is an explosive one. Someday, somebody will light the match.

The tips in this article are good, and if people scoff at this, denigrate it, mock it... they are the fools, and will likely be the ones we must contend with because they will be the ones looking for ways to survive and those who have prepared will become their targets. This might mean some very unpleasant situations, but that is what "they" chose and the fruit of their choices will go with them.

Unity, cooperation and preparing for the worst while looking for the best... we can't be fools believing lies and that somehow Superman or Batman will swoop down and save us from our own ignorance and neglect. We are all under attack... can't we see this? We have free choice and will, but most neglect to address the obvious... the evidence being thrown around us daily.

We all need to think... "I'm a herd animal as they view it, so I'll be treated as one, and I need to take steps to reverse that situation." If you enjoy that status, have a nice future. If you are tired of living like that, being treated as fodder... a lamb to be taken to the slaughter, then ignore reality and continue in your matrix. If you are tired of it all, begin taking steps to secure your lives and future. Food, water, protection, group strength, legal knowledge... survival mode. Beliefs, from Page 14 trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised (to life) incorruptible, and we (those alive at the time of the resurrection) shall be changed." NKJV.

"The dead shall rise?" Rise from where? From "the grave." There are three basic words translated "hell" in the Bible. The first and most often used word for "hell" is "Sheole," in the old testament, and "hades" in the new. These words are properly interpreted "the grave." The second word is "Gehenna," taken from the valley of Hinnom in Jerusalem in ancient times where dead animals, trash and occasional dead criminals were case into for cremation and decomposition from maggots, worms, etc.

The third word is Tartaroo, used only once in the entire Bible, and this is for a place of restraint for fallen angels/demons.

The plain truth about death is that all who have ever died are still in the grave, not anywhere else. In fact, if Christ had to be raised from death, who is anyone else to escape death and instantly be in heaven or hell?

Eph 1:19 "...according to the working of His mighty power :20 which He worked in Christ when He raised Him from the dead.." NKJV

Rom 1:3 "...concerning His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who was born of the seed of David according to the flesh, :4 and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." NKJV.

Acts 2:27 "For You will not leave my soul in Hades, Nor will You allow Your Holy One to see corruption." NKJV.

This was a quote from Psa 16:10 regarding Christ Himself. Christ was three days and three nights in... where? Hell, or, hades... the grave.

He was asleep, unconscious for that entire time till the Father resurrected Him to life again. His body was not allowed to see corruption... meaning, decompose.

Acts 2:23 "Him, (Christ) being delivered by the determined purpose and foreknowledge of God, you have taken by lawless hands, have crucified, and put to death; :24 whom God raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be held by it." NKJV.

Until that resurrection, Christ was clearly "held" by death, and in the grave, and only the Father could "loose the pains of death" and bring Him back to life and consciousness as a spirit

- People in Africa are donating money to

- Americans.
- Motel Six won't leave the light on.
- The Mafia is laying off judges.
- And finally...
- Congress says they are looking into this Bernard Madoff scandal. Great news...the guy who made $50 billion disappear will be investigated by the people who made $750 billion disappear.

When they finally cross the line and declare martial law for what ever myriad of reasons that may or may not be orchestrated by "them," will we have descended to the final stage that brings us to shooting the bastards? Each person alive has to deal with the line in the sand that states "enough." Be it forced inoculations for the coming flu season, to gun confiscation and/or forced relocation, each person has to have a breaking point to insure they are not another victim of madmen at the helm of rogue governments mirroring times past, because to say 'it wont happen here" had to have been repeated from the lips of the millions of dead from last century, murdered at the hands of their protectors. Nothing is more disconsolate than betrayal of trust resulting in genocide.

Reported by multiple sources, including the Times of India, vaccines contaminated with deadly live H5N1 avian flu virus were distributed to 18 countries last December by a lab at an Austrian branch of Baxter and yet they are furnishing the swine flu vaccine to be used world wide. Talk about the fox/hen house scenario, as is it any wonder people are worried about being poked by force?

Posted across thousands of boards and chat rooms are the rants of heavily armed pissed off individuals threatening lead fever to all comers as AIG hands out more bonuses. Makes one wonder how many straws remain to be stacked, as the camel is looking exhausted. Is it me or does it seem the powers that be are like the bully in the play ground in our face saying, "go ahead pussy hit me" after stealing our lunch money and body slamming us into the mud? I am not alone when I say I am just a bit sick of this shit.

But the problem remains as to who are "they." Who is the justifiable heir of our wrath? Just exactly who is the Illuminati/Bilderberg/Globalist/New World Order scum we must destroy to save us from further humiliation? Because after we get past the Department of State-Justice-Homeland Security-Agriculture-Treasury-Revenue-Interior-Environmental-Conservation-Public-Health-Transportation-Taxation-Energy-Finance-Education-Labor-and Entomology, then we must deal with the FBI-DEA-NSA-CIA-BATFE-IRS... along with the Border Patrol - State Patrol - County Patrol - City Patrol... not to mention the U S Marshalls which are backed up by the Army-Navy-Air Force- Marines-Coast Guard-National Guard- (NOT the County Guard...) and the US POSTAL SYSTEM, we can then bring justice to these cockroach bad guy slimeball dickweeds, as soon as American Idol is over for the season.

What I am betting is that these shadowy, evil, murdering Luciferians are sitting in their Star Chamber laughing their asses off saying, "how many more of these simple minded worthless eaters do we have to kill, ripoff and torture to push them to the revolting point so we can slaughter them wholesale? I suppose it is time to unleash the plagues and tank the markets so we can throw some starvation, disease and pestilence at them to see if that will do it. Might as well flip the switch on the electricity as well, just for shits and giggles."

If anyone of us human fodder were to take a good look at the Great Federal Reserve Ponzi Scheme it is obviously a flawed system purposely geared towards failure. Like the current Chinese coffee makers we toss in the heap every year or two, the fraudulent money creation system is designed to become top heavy and topple, leaving a handful of "them" with everything. But having everything is a pain in the ass with all these subhuman ingrates milling about, so the final solution has to be to orchestrate a mass culling by turning them against each other as they will not worship correctly, for their minds are filled by some invisible being who resides some where in the clouds and this is unacceptable, so they all must die.

In signing off, I want to bring attention to the psyop of division. Red state/blue state, conservative/liberal, black/pink (they call us white but I seem to resemble pink more closely), gay/straight, Muslim/Christian etc., all tools exploited for their indoctrination of hatred. Don't fall for it.

Blog Responses:

1. Nobody wants violence, but the inexorable push towards rendering this nation a TORTURE GULAG and SURVEILLANCE STATE beyond what the Soviet Union way in it's heyday, is going to push enough people to do just exactly whatever it takes to dethrone the puppet and the shadow governors and re-install a government 'for and by We The People' and not for and by the lobbyists, corporations, and rich european bankers who've run the nation into the toilet for us.

Most people are well aware of what this nation is becoming. And yes, there are still the 20 or so percent amongst us who are brainwashed and or ignorant to the point they NEED to follow authoritarian DICTATORS more than they need LIBERTY and FREEDOM.

In the end, there'll be another bloody revolt, lasting a couple of years, perhaps the better part of 3 years before all the smoke clears and the bodies are buried, but it's hoped that out of the ashes of this torture gulag we now live in, we'll once again have a nation that doesn't invade others for their resources, or illegitimately occupy and subjugate people on other continents just because they happen to either sit on top of huge oil reserves, or are in the way of a gas pipeline we need to shove thru their turf.

The U.S. is dead, and what we are now is an aberration that defies a good and accurate description. The best term I could come up with, in all of my years, is; "EMPIRE", and we're well on the slope of decay and defeat. Isn't it time we re-booted, after a few thousand trials, and hangings for TREASON?

2. Who are "They", what is this place really, and what do I/we do about the picture coming into focus for us are among the biggest questions. Jim Marrs, the best-selling author on the JFK assassination, UFOs, and Secret Societies forwards a hypothesis that you should check out and judge for yourself. The biggest "They" could be alien life forms; managing us like some kind of herd for their benefits. The best presentation of this hypothesis I've seen is David Icke. He lays it out here: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=M35gsedKjMM> . Enjoy.

3. All of this is being done for a reason. The United States, is, for all practical purposes, shamelessly, nakedly BANKRUPT and INSOLVENT. The politicians are doing their damndest to not have to state it out in the open, but the United States, is 'Over With' and no longer a sovereign nation, nor is it a nation based upon rule-of-law, common-decency, morality, or fairness. It is simply a TORTURE GULAG, populated by selfish, ignorant fools who bleat like sheep when their government shears them down to the flesh, and expects them to like their new scab coat.

This is the end game of World Domination going on now. The Rothschilds and their Bilderberger buddies, have decided that it's now time to do whatever it takes to thin out the herd and make it impossible for any semblance of the middle class to exist anywhere. Either you are a prole, or you're a Rothie/Bilderberger. There are not enough resources to go around to allow the defunct U.S. to continue in it's charade of alleged world domination without everyone else in the rest of the world challenging it. By the way, most of the U.S. is being sold off to pay for the enormous debt that it has been purposely allowed to accrue, and this means even your water rights.

Will there be Martial Law declared soon? Oh, you can count on it. Will it be done as a pretense to raid Iran for it's oil resources, as a last ditch hegemonic attempt by the U.S. to steal yet one more nation's oil from it? You betcha it will be.

Will the American sheeple be shot down in the streets by 'XE' mercenaries and foreign troops during the insurrection? Yep!

So, in summary, it truly is time to arm yourself and be ready for a very high probability of overbearing federal regulations arbitrarily determined by FSA in favor of corporate factory farms.

H.R. 875 would violate the Tenth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution by delegating what should be state-level authority to the federal government. The burdensome record keeping that would be required by the FSA would threaten the success of small agricultural businesses and family-owned farms who may not be able to comply with new federal restrictions.

While all Americans should be concerned about yet another power grab at the hands of the federal government, family farm and other small agricultural businesses should be especially cautious of H.R. 875 as it threatens their own businesses and way of living.

Please take a few moments of your time and urge your representative to oppose the passage of H.R. 875 and support the future success of family farms and small agricultural businesses.

Fluoride - Deadly Chemical in our Water and Food Supplies!

fluoride, a waste by-product of aluminum manufacturing, has been used in our water supplies for generations, claiming it to be "good for teeth." The truth is, the disposal of fluoride is costly because it is listed as hazardous material , so some geniuses decided to put it in our water supplies and call it good for us.

"In point of fact, fluorine causes more human cancer death, and causes it faster, than any other chemical." Dean Burk PhD, former chief of cytochemistry at the U.S. National Cancer Institute.

Many reconstituted juice products in our stores use city water, filtered, yes, but most filtration systems do not remove fluoride from the water, and thus, we are receiving double and triple doses of fluoride from this source.

Get together and stop fluoride from being put in your water supplies... we did that in Pagosa, so you can, too!

A grass roots event organized by Brenda Felmlee, Alamosa Republican Party Vice Chair, and other American Activists was well attended with a first time crowd of over 100 people. Ms. Felmlee thanked the Valley Courier for their announcement of the event but said they gave credit for organizing and promoting the event to the Republican Party which was responsible for neither.

The Tea Parties being organized and attended throughout the US are non partisan events for the purpose of giving a voice to the People of America who are currently being ignored by elected officials, both Democrats and Republicans. In the past larger events numbering in the hundreds of thousands of participants have been ignored by the White house and Democrat majority in both houses of Congress.

More "Tea Parties," Organizational events and peaceful demonstrations are being planned for the SLV area. Look to the pages of The South west Free Press for information and locations.

Forced Vaccinations? Just Say NO!

The Free Press has received word that it is possible that our school kids (among others) may be forced to receive vaccinations to stay in school. If this is planned, we have but one recourse... remove our kids from the schools completely, and threaten those that would force a biological weapon on us with legal action.

Consider it an act of terrorism... a biological threat against people which should be refused. If the schools have no kids, they have no jobs and no income... which should pretty much nip this idiocy in the bud.

The only problem is, if people do NOT stand up to protect their kids from this biological attack, we are inviting even MORE intrusion into our lives. This is a major threat to health, NOT salvation against swine flu. It is a direct attack on your health and that of your kids...

Archuleta County Citizens Paying Outrageous Sheriff Department Phone Bills

Sheriff department economics seems to be quite a mess... Recent expenditures for cell phone bills are unacceptable: Brandon Bishop, $2,500 cell phone bill; Richey Valdez, $1,500. How can anyone rack up such high bills for a cell phone when most of us know enough to be on an unlimited calling plan for 10 times less? How could such charges even accrue? Are these real cell phone charges, or is this money going for something else?

Bombshell: Orders revoked for soldier challenging prez.

A U.S. Army Reserve, Maj. Stefan Frederick Cook, from Florida, scheduled to report for deployment to Afghanistan within days has had his military orders revoked after he argued that he should not be required to serve under a president who has not proven his legitimacy for office.

His attorney, Orly Taitz, confirmed to WND the military has rescinded his impending deployment orders. "It means that the military has nothing to show for Obama. It means that the military has directly responded by saying Obama is illegitimate – and they cannot fight it. Therefore, they are revoking the order!"

UPDATE: In retaliation, the Department of Defense has allegedly compelled a private employer to fire a U.S. Army Reserve major from his civilian job after he had his military deployment orders revoked for arguing he should not be required to serve under a president who has not proven his eligibility for office.

According to the CEO of Simtech Inc., a private company located in Tampa, Fla., and contracted by the Defense Security Services, an agency of the Department of Defense, the federal government has compelled the termination of Maj. Stefan Frederick Cook.

Editor's Note: This eligibility case has now been accepted in a California Court. The Judge has stated he will hear all elements, not reject evidence and that this case is important and should Obama be found ineligible, he should leave the White House.

Every American juror has a Constitutional right to acquit all defendants of consensual crimes based on nothing more than a disagreement with the law, no matter the evidence - despite the judge's false instructions to the contrary. There is no legal obligation to vote "guilty" to arrive at a unanimous verdict, but there are many good reasons to vote not guilty. So do your patriotic duty and preserve individual liberty at the same time by getting on a jury, standing your ground against intimidating judges and misinformed/unthinking jurors, fulfilling the juries original purpose (to counteract big abusive government), and stop convicting non-violent people of non-crimes. for all of us! Read the words of our Founding Fathers! They brought our country into being to get away from the aristocratic tyranny of England and the rest of European monarchies.

Will we let this ensuing tragedy happen? It still could be the land of the free and the home of the brave.

"NEW WORLD ORDER" now an advertising slogan!

The term "New World Order" should be as offensive to every American as a swastika is to a Jew. Just as the swastika was one of the emblems of the power seeking to eliminate the Jew (among others), so the NWO is one of the names of the power seeking to eliminate the sovereignty of this nation (as well as all others), in favor of a "one-world government". (Interestingly, Hitler himself used the phrase "New World Order" to refer to the structure he intended to build.) If you are a Christian, you know exactly what this "final" government will be about, and who will be at the helm, but even if you're not, you should be smart enough by now to spot a world-wide fascist state in the making when you see one.

What sort of voice do you think you will have in such a structure? What sort of rights will you have? Do you think that this will be an improvement, in ANY way, over the constitution our Founding Fathers gave us? With the coming to power of the Obama regime and the new crop of globalist thugs who back him, the NWO is now "out of the closet" and is being actively promoted in many quarters. To wit, I found this while walking down Main Ave. in Durango, CO. A clean white poster, with the words "A new world order", and a pair of Oakly sunglasses.

Are we to believe it possible that a top-name company, spending big dollars on advertising, having multiple individuals in authority signing-off on an advertising campaign, in fact has no idea what they are saying or what they are promoting? Would you use a swastika to promote your product and put it in the window of your storefront? This nonsense is commonly known as "gradualism", and it seems to be working, as hundreds of people a day walk by this display and no one seems to care. An individual, other than myself, who does care, called Oakly and encountered people who didn't seem to have a clue. It was promised that the matter would be looked into. Weeks later, the display is still in the store window.

P.S. Since this article was written, the store has redone their entire window display, and the sign is no longer there.

Editor's Note: Hopefully, this is beginning to sink in to our public consciousness. Do we see the handwriting on the wall, or are we too busy with distractions, disbelief and avoidance?

Te be any plainer or clear, we will see military in our streets and our neighbors and ourselves being herded to forced vaccination centers, concentration camps or worse places... where the guillotines are waiting for us!

bloody and protracted, quite ugly fight against the government for your very right to exist, for they are doing the Rothschild's bidding for them and carrying out the eugenics agenda to thin out the herd on the U.S. continent.

This is a war for our very survival, and our government is not with us. It is an agent of the wealthy European bankers strictly because it has become one out of outright bankruptcy and stupidity.

In the end the blog owner's 'be nice' warning amuses me here, because in all actuality, some of us will surely be shooting each other in the coming revolution and there will be no 'nice' about any of that. We are on the brink and the government is unable to stop this. Look for Martial Law anytime between now and the fall, and a formal U.S. default on it's debt obligation, and the ensuing 'bank holiday' that will come on the heels of that.

It's time to ammo up, and ensure you know how to fire your weapons with accuracy so you won't be wasting your ammunition. We're there.

Pope calls for a "global authority" on economy

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) - Pope Benedict called on Tuesday for a "world political authority" to manage the global economy and for more government regulation of national economies to pull the world out of the current crisis and avoid a repeat.

The pope made his call for a re-think of the way the world economy was run in a new encyclical which touched on a number of social issues but whose main connecting thread was how the current crisis has affected both rich and poor nations.

Parts of the encyclical, titled "Charity in Truth," seemed bound to upset free marketers because of its underlying rejection of unbridled capitalism and unregulated market forces, which he said had led to "thoroughly destructive" abuse of the system and "grave deviations and failures."

An encyclical is the highest form of papal writing and gives the clearest indication to the world's 1.1 billion Catholics -- and to non-Catholics -- of what the pope and the Vatican think about specific social and moral issues.

The pope said every economic decision had a moral consequence and called for "forms of redistribution" of wealth overseen by governments to help those most affected by crises.

Benedict said "there is an urgent need of a true world political authority" whose task would be "to manage the global economy; to revive economies hit by the crisis; to avoid any deterioration of the present crisis and the greater imbalances that would result."

Such an authority would have to be "regulated by law" and "would need to be universally recognized and to be vested with the effective power to ensure security for all, regard for justice, and respect for rights."

"Obviously it would have to have the authority to ensure compliance with its decisions from all parties, and also with the coordinated measures adopted in various international forums," he said.

The United Nations, economic institutions and international finance all had to be reformed "even in the midst of a global recession," he said in the encyclical, a booklet of 141 pages.

The pope's call for a supranational body to tackle global economic woes disturbed some Catholic capitalists.

"There is a difference between coordination and mandate ... a reckless loan in the United States can and did impoverish people in Latvia. So obviously coordination is important as long as it is not mandates," said Frank Keating, CEO of the American Council of Life Insurers and former Governor of Oklahoma.

The encyclical was addressed to all Catholics and "all people of good will" and was released on the eve of the start of the G8 summit in Italy and three days before the pope is due to discuss the global downturn with U.S. President Barack Obama.

In several sections of the encyclical, Benedict made it clear he had great reservations about a totally free market.

"The conviction that the economy must be autonomous, that it must be shielded from 'influences' of a moral character, has led man to abuse the economic process in a thoroughly destructive way," he said.

"In the long term, these convictions have led to economic, social and political systems that trample upon personal and social freedom and are therefore unable to deliver the justice that they promise," he added.

Profit was useful only if it served as a means to a brighter future for all humanity.

"Once profit becomes the exclusive goal, if it is produced by improper means and without the common good as its ultimate end, it risks destroying wealth and creating poverty," he said.

being once again. The new testament congregation knew this truth, but corrupting forces perverted this doctrine over time. "Dante's Inferno" was a major player in this false belief about death, creating a great (false) fear of "hell," and coercing people into accepting their teachings.

Many people are reading the Constitution and studying the basics of the legal system, and waking up to how far we have strayed from the law and Constitution, and are finding huge surprises about what the laws actually are and aren't, and how they have been misled by willful, or ignorant, people, into doping things the law doesn't require. So, too, are people realizing that by simply reading the Bible, and putting the pieces together that address any given issue, despite what they've been taught, they discover a completely different picture. The doctrines we've all been taught and believed all our lives have been just as distorted by "evil," as have our rights and freedoms in this physical world... same enemies, same agenda.

The agenda has not changed. The pattern can be seen clearly throughout history... deception, subjugation, slavery, fear, control, manipulation, misinformation... It is the same within the religious world, and it will play a huge part in future world events unless we know what the fundamental law says, from God Himself.

Next time, we will address the obvious conflict referenced in Acts 2:27 and Psa 16:10... that of the "soul" of Christ and how it could possibly be "left" in the grave if it was a separate thing apart from the body that was dead.

Hint... humans do not "have" souls, they "ARE" souls, and this is why no one dead is anywhere but the grave, just like Christ was, and will have to wait for their resurrection. Proof of what the soul actually is, is throughout the Bible.

"Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of the mouth of God." Be ready to be further challenged by God's own words, and "prove all things."

He said the current economic crisis was "clear proof" of "pernicious effects of sin" in the economy.

"Financiers must rediscover the genuinely ethical foundation of their activity ...," he said.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel, who had rebuked the pope earlier this year at the height of the row over a Holocaust-denying bishop, welcomed the encyclical as important encouragement for world leaders ahead of a G8 meeting in Italy.

"Pope Benedict has encouraged the state leaders to create rules so that this sort of worldwide economic crisis isn't repeated," Merkel told reporters. "I also saw this as an order to work toward a social market economy in the world."

The pope appeared to back government intervention "in correcting errors and malfunctions" in the economy, saying "one could foresee an increase in the new forms of political participation, nationally and internationally."

Editor's Note:

Can anyone say New World Order? How about One World Government? Of course, the power that can create these, and a one world monetary system... would be quite the "Beast," wouldn't you say? How does one stop this Beast? CAN anyone stop this? This will show the world where the world stands in relations to truth and error, right and wrong, good and evil.

Is it written that people must be forced into accepting lies, fraud or corruption? NO! Is it inevitable that this comes? NO! Free will and free choice are being challenged in all this. This isn't an issue of fate, or some dictated decree by God... but it IS a decree that we be given free choice to make our own decisions and choose between... good or evil, right and wrong...

The package being prepared for humanity will appear very good, very appealing and very seductive. It will appear peaceful, incredibly "right" and will reward people for making the wrong choices that will ultimately lead to far greater consequences... but that is what evil does... deceives with what appears as good, but isn't.

Is it coincidence that this falls directly in line with biblical writings? What do the churches say? Have we failed the test of being able to discern between good and evil, right and wrong? Have we begun to embrace the very elements of our own destruction wrapped up in a package that appears as mankind's salvation? Have we forgotten something in all this?

Anyone who discards the battle taking place right now... who dismisses right and wrong... who mocks "absolutes in law," are the ones that will be most deceived by what is coming!
